

COMPOST CAMP - 2011

Chapter 4 The End Of The Story.

1. Your basic compost-specific conveyor. Short on ground space – or do you just like big piles? Well, you can sure-enough do about whatever you want with this baby – from cones to donuts and everything in-between - it rotates 360° - and maybe more! Don't recall the exact specs, but think the conveyor length is in the 120-foot range and can build piles 60 to 80 feet high. Maybe don't want to try this at home – it might annoy the neighbors! Feeding it on the left is the previously-shown mobile track-mounted grinder.

2. Want to grind shingles – and maybe some other things, too? Well, this'll do it. This machine is definitely not for the grinding hobbyist.

Epilogue

This started off as being a simple, fun photo essay for our website that got way out of hand. At the time these photos were taken, no notes were made and the text was written from memory. Accordingly, details are wanting and some may be in error. There was very much more equipment and many more demonstrations than depicted here. The few wildlife, facility and scenic photos shown don't even scratch the surface. We finally had to put an end to it, someplace – leaving out some nice photos. Of course, no photo could begin to convey the gracious hospitality extended to us by
